1. Programme Overview:

Urbanisation, high rate of population hike, increasing agricultural activity, industrial use poses unusual pressure on ground water level on earth, global warming, changing climate scenario, erratic rainfall pattern also had impacted availability of ground water. Already many countries even some parts of India are suffering from acute shortage of surface water. If we do not become cautious about the situation soon it will become disastrous. Presently 45% of Indian population is facing severe water crisis. Already cities like Delhi, Chennai, Bengaluru facing problem of usable water supply which is predicted to be more severe by 2030. In west Bengal some villages of Bankura, Purulia and Birbhum are facing acute crisis during summer months. It is the high time to change our mindset for rationally use the available water, implementing advanced water policy, promoting micro irrigation and less water use efficient crop plants. Even in this critical situation, the silver lining is that most of the states of India, some districts of West Bengal in particular due to unique geographical location are adequately rain fed. Many a times due to excessive rain in the season many cities, towns agricultural lands are over flooded. One plausible solution to the water deficiency of other places may be tackled by harvesting the rain water without allowing it to waste and judiciously store it and utilize when needed.

That needs spreading of this idea to common people and young generations, make them aware about the techniques and intricacies of harvesting rain water in hygienic way at domestic level, community level and industrial level. The present proposal has been formulated to conduct two days seminars/ workshop in the form of lectures by eminent speakers of this area and hands on demonstration using model to college and high school level students.

2. Objectives of the Programme

- To spread awareness about water crisis of India and climate-induced groundwater depletion
- To introduce students to the principles of rain water harvesting
- To train participants using working models and hands-on demonstrations
- To encourage rational water use, micro-irrigation, and sustainable water policy understanding
- To promote green behaviour and responsible environmental practice
- To stimulate scientific interest among students and young citizens

4. Expected Outcomes

- Participants will develop an improved understanding of groundwater issues and the impacts of climate change.
- They will gain knowledge of practical rainwater harvesting systems.
- The programme will enhance scientific curiosity and promote environmental responsibility among students.

- Students will be able to design simple rainwater harvesting models and will apply the concepts learned during the sessions.
- Awareness will be strengthened through interactive, quiz-based learning activities.
- The programme will motivate youth to promote rainwater harvesting in their homes, schools, and communities.

Who are we?

Kolkata Nivedita Shakti (KNS) is a charitable trust, which is the West Bengal unit of SHAKTI- A National Movement for Women, an initiative by Vijnana Bharati. We work towards making the young girls and women empowered with apt scientific temperament, technological prowess, and socio- cultural awareness, so that they become instrumental to the country and the society's holistic progress and development. Our goal is to make every woman we work for, ATMANIRBHAR – self-reliant.

What we do?

- Providing a platform, a vehicle for young girls and women to display their talent through participation in exhibitions, workshops, seminars, visits, etc. so that they get hands on experience in the fields of science & technology, and finer arts.
- We work in the village areas for the rural women, ensuring their financial independence and contribution to the rural economy by way of organizing quality assurance talks, workshops on handicrafts and handmade home products, etc.
- Fostering research and publication of the work done by women in the field of science & technology, so that it augments further research, and motivates other such women to work towards the progress of their nation.
- Organizing awareness campaigns to make women aware of their legal rights, and the importance of social justice. This is essential to bust many myths and taboos surrounding women in the society, with a scientific rationale.

And For Whom?

Our aim is to reach the young girls, the women, and the children in our state who have a flair for knowledge and wish to contribute to the nation with their knowledge, scientific rigor and latent talent. We have a special focus on the rural women since we understand that villages sit miles away from the hubs of socio-economic development, we intend to lessen this disparity by empowering them at a level which makes them equal contributor to the country's progress.

Aspects of Holistic Development-

	Societal progress comes when women in the society contribute to the nation equally without any financial or social restraints. -Myths, taboos and misinformation around menstruation, pregnancy, child-planning has to be removed with scientific rationale, and awareness on these topics. -Legal rights and duties of the women as the citizens of this country, and the knowledge of judicial proceedings will make them confident to fight for their rights.		-Since West Bengal hosts a rich and vibrant culture that amazes the whole India as well as the world, inhabiting knowledge and fostering respect for one's culture is important in becoming an informed citizen of the state, and the nation. -Research on our cultural heritage, and traditions of our ancient civilization will help in documenting more and more knowledge within our Bhartiya Gyan Parampara. -Culture is an indispensable part of one's identity, preserving the culture, and providing platforms for showcasing our cultural heritage - contributes to national identity too.		-A woman who is economically at par with the man, contributing to the society, is the ideal state for women empowerment in any society. -Financial independence becomes more essential in the case of rural women as compared to the urban women, as they have meagre sources of income, and their lack of education leads to lower wages, ending in a vicious cycle. -If women actively contribute to every sector- agriculture, industry and services, with the help of technical knowledge, and required skills, it'll ultimately boost the country's economic growth.		-Intellectual development in terms of critical thinking, creative expression and problem solving is integral to a robust skill set needed for overall personality development. -Quizzes, and competitions expanding the mental horizons of the youth so that they grow up to become well - informed, and intellectually sound adults. -Cognitive and reasoning skills encourages the scientific temperament of any individual, we works towards developing those skills.

KNS believes in empowerment of women, and in path breaking women role models who can inspire young girls in the field of science and technology. To honour such a role model, we celebrated the 161st birth anniversary of Dr. Kadambini Ganguly, the 1st Asian female physician from Calcutta Medical College, on 24th July.
